

Lori Ryan PhD. is Clinical Assistant Professor at the University of Colorado Denver's School of Education and Human Development with an emphasis on early education, educational leadership, diversity and equity. Lori's teaching, research, coaching, and consulting focus on building the capacity of teachers and leaders. She collaborates in inquiry projects focused on learning in the natural world, school gardens and healthy eating. Lori promotes, in partnership with communities, a strong image of children, teachers and families as co-constructors of their own learning stories within unique cultural contexts. Lori is co-director and faculty of the Buell Early Childhood Leadership Program, where annually a cohort of fellows engage in transformational learning to create opportunities for Colorado's children and families. Lori also works in partnership with early learning schools and community college partners to nurture the growth of teacher candidates at the undergraduate level, helping to build a strong and competent early childhood workforce in Colorado.
